202425	Summer - May Term	Justice and Civic Responsibility	ECC101	JUSTICE CIV RESP SEM	The Perils of Indifference - The goals of this class are to think about how apathy and silence are unsatisfying responses to injustice, to practice the skill of reading thought-provoking books and articulating ideas with one another, and to grow as attentive, intelligent, reasonable and responsible people who consider how individual flourishing is not independent from that of my neighbor. The first part of the class will survey texts and ideas from people who model what caring deeply about justice looks like. During the second part of the semester, we'll focus specifically on the issue of homelessness in the United States. Course will meet 5/14/25 - 5/30/25.	1	Cunningham, Joseph	MON 9:00am-12:10pm, TUE 9:00am-12:10pm, WED 9:00am-12:10pm, THU 9:00am-12:10pm, FRI 9:00am-12:10pm	3	$ 1,755
202425	Summer - May Term	Ethical Reasoning	ECC490W	ETHICAL REASONING SEM	Ethical Reasoning in Education - This course is designed to expose students through multiple thematic topics that inform and define ethical and moral decisions in current schools and classrooms. Students will learn how to recognize these topics and implement strategies to address ethical improprieties that they may encounter as professionals. Course will meet 5/14/25 - 5/30/25.	1	Carver, Whitney	MON 8:00am-11:10am, TUE 8:00am-11:10am, WED 8:00am-11:10am, THU 8:00am-11:10am, FRI 8:00am-11:10am	3	$ 1,755

202526	Fall	Ethical Reasoning	ECC490W	ETHICAL REASONING SEM	Research Ethics - This course examines ethical issues in research, broadly defined, across historical and contemporary contexts. Through discussion-driven classes, critical readings, and reflective writing, students will explore how core beliefs about ethics in research developed historically and how they apply to complex modern situations. Case studies, from notorious experiments to current ethical dilemmas, will ground our analysis. By the end of the course, students will have honed their ability to recognize ethical issues in nuanced contexts and to articulate their own ethical stance informed by history, theory, and personal reflection.	2	Swan, Alexander	MON 11:00am-11:50am, WED 11:00am-11:50am, FRI 11:00am-11:50am	3
202526	Fall	Ethical Reasoning	ECC490W	ETHICAL REASONING SEM	Cults and Conspiracies: How You Get In, How You Get Out - In this section of ECC490W, we will examine the cultural and psychological features of cults and conspiracy theories. The course will explore what cults teach us about human nature and how we make ethical choices for ourselves and others. We will also reflect on how cultish thinking is part of our everyday lives and modern social structures, from social media to MLMs to Crossfit. How do you get pulled into a cult? And how do you get out again?	3	Whitacre, Adrian	MON 11:00am-11:50am, WED 11:00am-11:50am, FRI 11:00am-11:50am	3
202526	Fall	Ethical Reasoning	ECC490W	ETHICAL REASONING SEM	Social Agility - The purpose of this senior seminar is to help students assess what they have learned as undergraduate students and translate that learning into their behavior in the world. The course also acts as a bridge to life-long learning. Classes are conducted in both a discussion and hands on application format. This specific course is focused on the art and science of communication and how that communication provides influence to others. Identifying, analyzing, and ultimately manipulating variables that influence human performance. How to create buy in, how to use manipulation in an ethical way, how our drives influence our communication style, and more. Utilizing positions of influence to get others to move towards a common goal in a complex environment that can only be mastered through experience. Students will gain this experience through studying the literature and practically applying the strategies in this class.	4	Bolkema, Justin	TUE 11:00am-12:15pm, THU 11:00am-12:15pm	3

202526	Fall	Justice and Civic Responsibility	ECC101	JUSTICE CIV RESP SEM	Hidden Norms of the Middle Class: This class will challenge students' current mental models of poverty, middle class and wealth. This class will discuss the hidden rules of the class in which a person is raised and how those norms influence perceptions and judgments of others. This class will explore the many cultures within the American culture and challenge stereotypes and prejudices about the poor. Students will participate in a service project working with displaced and homeless persons.	1	Cummins, Jonathan	TUE 2:45pm-4:00pm, THU 2:45pm-4:00pm	3
202526	Fall	Justice and Civic Responsibility	ECC101	JUSTICE CIV RESP SEM	Environmental Justice: The study of environmental justice is largely the study of environmental inequality. Environmental inequality refers to the uneven distribution of environmental burdens (such as being exposed to toxins) and benefits (like access to clean air) across space and time. This class will examine how space and place affects human and environmental well-being. We will also investigate your own relationship to the natural world. By taking this course you will develop a critical understanding of what constitutes environmental privilege and oppression by examining the historical roots of current, persistent, environmental inequalities across the globe. What are the historical roots of environmental inequality? Is social justice essential to, or at odds with efforts to build a sustainable world? Additionally, we will investigate these issues through a personal lens. What are your attitudes towards the natural world and your place in it? How do these attitudes impact your everyday life? To answer these and other questions we'll work together to read texts, discuss, listen to the expertise of those working in sustainable agriculture and conservation, get out in the field and explore, and undertake a group service project.	2	Zimmerman, Jason	TUE 11:00am-12:15pm, THU 11:00am-12:15pm	3

202526	Spring	Ethical Reasoning	ECC490W	ETHICAL REASONING SEM	College and its End(s) - The elemental questions with which this seminar is concerned—questions that likely will not yield elemental answers—are: what is an education and what is it for? These may seem strange questions to ask after the fact—that is, when your education is all but complete—but for reasons that hopefully will become evident, this line of inquiry in the final year of your college education (perhaps especially in that year) seems fitting. To state but one justification: the richness of an experience can in some ways be measured by the amount of subsequent reflection that experience merits. To state the matter differently, if the rumination of a person is indistinguishable from that of a cow, then that person has no meaningful education to speak of. In brief, this is a class on the purpose of an education and whether or not recent developments in higher education further that end or undermine it.	2	Eisenberg, David	MON 12:00pm-12:50pm, WED 12:00pm-12:50pm, FRI 12:00pm-12:50pm	3
