202627	2	08 - Justice and Civic Responsibility	ECC101	JUSTICE CIV RESP SEM	Language & Social Justice - This course explores the relationship between language and social justice through an examination of linguistic diversity both in the United States and abroad. Students will consider both historical and contemporary examples of linguistic injustice, as well as the additional civic responsibility that comes with being a native speaker of English. Students will complete a signature assessment aligned to the Justice and Civic Responsibility (JCR) capability. As part of this course, students will be required to complete a service learning project or a practicum/field experience.	1	McCune, William	TUE 9:30am-10:45am, THU 9:30am-10:45am	3

202627	2	08 - Justice and Civic Responsibility	ECC101	JUSTICE CIV RESP SEM	Gender and Sexuality: Have you ever wondered why people trust science as a source of truth about sexual difference and sexuality? Or why it is we think people are "born" with their sexual orientations, desires, and preferences? Are sexual identities "natural" phenomena? And do bodies serve as the "real" foundation of supposedly binary sexual differences? This course explores these very questions. In this course, we will adopt an historical perspective to investigate how science has influenced our views regarding sexual difference and sexuality, and how science has claimed authority over questions regarding sex and sexuality. We will also focus our attention at and beyond the limits of sex and gender, examining: (1) the ways in which we, as a culture, interpret physiological variation and different sexual orientations; (2) transgender experiences and categories; (3) and the role of technology in (re)shaping the 'natural' sexes. We will be asking what is 'natural' and 'unnatural' about the assumed biological categories of male and female, and how our answers to these questions has profound implications for questions of justice. As part of this course, students will be required to do a service learning project.	2	Crisan, Cezara	TUE 9:30am-10:45am, THU 9:30am-10:45am	3
